Course Syllabus:

Did you know that the word “algorithm” comes from the name of a Persian-Muslim polymath by the name of al-Khwarizmi? This brilliant scholar lived much of his life in Baghdad, wrote in Arabic, and the word “algebra” appeared in his 9th century manuscript, which is from Arabic meaning al-jabr and jabara (reintegration, or reunite). This is but an example of numerous English words that come from or through the Arabic language attesting to their contribution and relationships to the rest of the world, including Europe. Historically, the Middle East, also known as the “Cradle of Civilization” and Europe traded and had social, economic, and cultural entanglements, despite contemporary negative media stereotypes and misrepresentations that depict the relationship between “East” and “West” as oppositional, hostile and mutually exclusive entities. In this course, we challenge some of the racist representations of Arabs and Muslims in western societies and examine how these are related to the constant attempts by imperial powers to dominate the region, which vie for control of this important strategic region rich with resources, especially oil and gas. We learn in this course that the “Middle East” - a colonial nomenclature - is a vast and heterogeneous region with changing histories, as well as political, social, and cultural formations. Thus, we are only able to focus on a few specific themes and topics that enrich students’ knowledge and are of interest and relevance to contemporary debates.

But we must begin with a general overview of its geography and demography asking where and what is the Middle East. Secondly, we examine the critical historical transformations that shaped societies and cultures over time, mainly: the rise of the Arab-Islamic empire in the 7th century, including the Andalusian period (Spain today), and European colonialism, especially its legacy in places like Algeria and Palestine. Third, we look at the central arguments that Edward Said made in his groundbreaking book Orientalism. Orientalism is a perspective or paradigm through which much of the knowledge in the 'West' about the 'East' is produced. Hollywood produces films which are underpinned by an orientalist worldview in that they reinforce images of Arabs and Muslims as violent (terrorists) and backward; in western societies generally speaking, such characterizations are wrongly associated with the religion of Islam. Fourth, we will read and discuss issues pertaining to class and gender and ask for example why is it that in western societies there is an obsession with women’s bodies and veiling? Fifth and final section we will select readings about the mass popular uprisings beginning in 2010/11 in Tunisia, popular culture, youth, or art production in the Middle East.

Through lectures divided into short segments, readings, forum or group discussions, films and documentaries, and online activities, the course will help students engage critically in academic and current public debates about the Middle East.

A full course schedule including a week-by-week breakdown of topics and assigned readings will be available on the course’s OWL site before the first day of class.

Learning Outcomes:
Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

- Examine, situate, and connect social and cultural phenomena pertaining to Arab and Islamic societies within larger historical and political (power) contexts.
- List some contributions and discoveries in science, philosophy, medicine, mathematics, and other kinds of knowledge made by Arabs and Muslims.
- Identify popular clichés, propaganda, and racist stereotypes and discourses about Arabs and Muslims, and distinguish these from scholarly knowledge and analytical approaches to Middle Eastern societies.
- Analyze racism against Arabs and Muslims situating it within a broader racist ideology that enables discrimination and racism against other groups.
- Define and grasp some basic knowledge of 'Orientalism' and the relationship between knowledge production and imperial projects of domination.
- Analyze contemporary and publicly debated issues, such as the question of women's veiling, or the Arab uprisings within regional and global social and historical processes.
- Identify some of the contemporary popular cultural trends.
