This course will examine human migration from an anthropological perspective that includes a brief historical overview of human mobility, issues that are currently being debated, case studies from around the world, and theoretical attempts to explain and predict human migration.

Prerequisite: A half Essay course in Arts and Humanities or Social Science. It is your responsibility to ensure that you have the prerequisite for this course. Unless you have either the requisite or special permission from your Dean, you may be removed from the course and it will be deleted from you record, without any adjustment to you fees.

Instructor: Dr. Sherrie Larkin
Office: SSC 3328
Email: slarkin@uwo.ca

Learning Outcomes: Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to

- Examine the migration literature critically and understand that there are many reasons why people migrate from one location to another.
- Recognize the effects border politics have on the ability of people to migrate from one state to another.
- Critically assess the popular media information presented about issues of migration.
• Understand that negative attitudes towards migrants, such as racism and ethnocentrism, may be difficult to change.

Course Structure:
This course has two components: the readings and assignments as outlined here, and an online component. Once you log into the site and purchase the required text, you will have access to the readings. The online component will provide links to other students in the course, to additional information about the readings and assignments, and to current ideas as they develop out of our interaction. You should begin to explore the site immediately to find out what it looks like and how it works.

Online Forums Postings:
The advantage of taking part in an online course is that it provides opportunities for all of us to interact on a regular basis through online discussions. All students must participate in the Forums. You are required to make at least two substantial contributions to the conversations each week. These contributions should be fully developed comments and questions, not simply one or two sentences; however, they should not be more than one or two paragraphs in length. They must deal with issues raised in the course readings, including substantial comments on the reading material, a question that you think might offer useful ideas for exploring the readings, some reflection on your experience with the issues in the course and so on. Feel free to post often and to respond to each other’s comments and queries. However, you may not post more than 6 messages in each Forum.

The purpose of these online discussions is to make the learning process interactive and collaborative, a process in which each of us will contribute to the learning of others at the same time that we learn from others. Keep your postings short and focused because students typically won’t read beyond one or two paragraphs. It’s better to post three short messages, for instance, instead of one long one. Your discussion grade will be based on both the quantity and quality of your online participation. You will receive two evaluations of your work: the first shortly after the end of Week 6; and the second after the end of Week 12. Your total Discussion Board postings mark is worth 40% of your course grade.

Response Essay:
The purpose of the response essay is to allow you to critically discuss and question the issues raised by the authors. Your goal in this assignment is to choose issues and ideas that you think are important. When I evaluate your papers, I will be looking for evidence that you have thought about and understood the issues covered in the course and that you have been able to incorporate points from a wide variety of the course readings.

Your response essay should be about 1,500 words in length and is worth 30% of your grade. Papers are to be submitted through the Assignment tool on our website by midnight of the due date. A penalty of 2% per week day may be deducted for late papers.

The Readings:
As you will notice, the amount of reading for each week is uneven. You can use this to your advantage when scheduling your own time and commitments.

Final Exam:
Your final exam will include some short answer questions and a short essay. The final exam is worth 30% of your total mark.
